

Girl at the Top in Health Tests

Millions of boys and girls all over the world, thousands of them right here in the West, are being restored to health and strength by the purely vegetable tonic and laxative known as California Fig Syrup and endorsed by physicians for over 50 years.

Children need no urging to take it. They love its rich, fruity flavor. Nothing can compete with it as a gentle, but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord. It stimulates the appetite, helps digestion.

A Kansas mother, Mrs. Dana All-gire, 610 Monroe St., Topeka, says: "Bonnie B. is absolutely the picture of health, now, with her ruddy cheeks, bright eyes and plump but graceful little body and she stands at the top in every health test."

Much of the credit for her perfect condition is due to California Fig Syrup. We have used it since baby-hood to keep her bowels active during colds or any children's ailments and she has always had an easy time with them. She always responds to its gentle urging and is quickly back to normal."

Ask your druggist for California Fig Syrup and look for the word "California" on the carton so you'll always get the genuine.

She was addressing a group of eager wide-eyed children at the regular library story hour. "Today, boys and girls, I am going to tell you a real scary story about a vampire. You know what a vampire is, don't you?"

"Oh, sure," answered one sophisticated youngster scornfully. "You mean the one who decides in a baseball game."

"Ho, ho," laughed another in derision. "Listen to him. He's talking about an empire."

That's the name of the new horse at the National museum. He's hailed as the missing link in the evolutionary chain of the modern horse. Many skeletal remains of this new and long-sought species of fossil steed have been discovered near Hagerman, Idaho, by a Smithsonian institution field party. Scientists regard the discovery as one of the most important in vertebrate paleontology in recent years.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Bedridden with Rheumatism

Rubs on oil...gets up right away

There's nothing like good old St. Jacobs Oil for relieving the aches and pains of Neuritis, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Backache, Neuralgia or sore Muscles. You rub it on. Without burning or blistering it quickly draws out pain and inflammation. Relief comes before you can count 60! Get a small bottle from your druggist.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson, Secretary Illinois Press Association, Mokena, Ill.

The February term of the Fayette county grand jury has returned 27 indictments against men charged with escaping from the Illinois state penal farm near Vandalia. Conviction under the charge in the indictments carries a penalty of an indeterminate term in the penitentiary of from one to ten years.

Thirty millions of game fish are produced every year at the Spring Grove fish hatchery, according to "The Fox Valley Mirror," published by Leonard Fowler. In all, 35 acres are utilized in the Spring Grove hatchery. Most of the area is taken up by ponds, rearing pens, and the lake into which flow 2,500 gallons of spring water every minute. Fish are transported from the hatchery in cars especially built for the purpose. Director Ralph F. Bradford, of the state department of conservation, distributed these fish to every county of the state where suitable waters are available.

Harry N. Cleveland, director of the department of public works and buildings, has announced that the department has completed contracts for the purchase of 4,105,000 barrels of cement at the lowest price in the history of the highway department. The average delivered price was $1.44 per barrel.

The Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness has completed the organization of 81 auxiliaries throughout the state. In the towns where auxiliaries have been organized, 729 prominent people have consented to serve to local committees for the society. The society estimates that it will take about a year to cover the entire state with its three field workers to complete the organization of necessary auxiliaries. The auxiliaries will co-operate in the formation of sight-saving classes in the public schools and on the very important work for the control of blindness among newborn infants. The organization of the auxiliaries was carried on under the direction of Miss Audrey M. Hayden, executive secretary of the society. The society's officers are: Russell Tyson, president; Dr. William H. Wilder, vice president; Herman Waldeck, treasurer; Dr. E. V. L. Brown, secretary to the directors. Prominent members of its advisory board are: Jane Addams, Mrs. Frank O. Lowden, Andrew Russell, Dr. Andy Hall and Hon. Morton D. Hull.

The Springfield Abraham Lincoln council, Boy Scouts of America, will ask for the issuance of special commemorative postage stamps to mark the one hundredth anniversary of the commissioning of Abraham Lincoln as postmaster at Old Salem. According to the plan, the stamps would be issued May 7, 1933, with the first sales in Springfield. Judge Benjamin S. DeBoice, chairman of the court of honor, has been authorized to negotiate with the postmaster general for the special stamps.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has named the Illinois Emergency Relief commission which will administer the $20,000,000 unemployment relief appropriation. The members are Edward L. Reyerson, Jr., A. A. Sprague, Victor A. Olander, Joseph M. Cudahy, and Samuel Insull, Jr., all of Chicago; Omar H. Wright, banker, of Belvidere; Arthur Eldman, banker, of Belleville.

The Democratic members of the house and senate went to Decatur, Wednesday evening, February 3, to attend a dinner given at the Hotel Orlando. Addresses were made by the following candidates: Michael L. Igoe, Chicago, Democratic candidate for governor; Bruce Campbell, East St. Louis, Democratic candidate for governor; Scott Lucas, Havana, Democratic candidate for United States senator. Thoms Donovan, Joliet, chairman of the Illinois State Democratic committee, also spoke.

In introducing Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, at the Lincoln program given at the state arsenal in Springfield, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson said, "At a time when the world seethes with unrest, when war looms in the Orient, when India threatens to rise up against British rule, when nations totter on the verge of financial bankruptcy or political revolution, it is a striking fact that Lincoln's star burns brighter than ever before and that the magnitude of his achievements assumes even greater proportions than in our days of ease and self-complacency."

Retail food prices on October 15, averaged 17.5 per cent lower than on the same date a year ago.

There will be federal participation in the Century of Progress, Chicago's World's fair in 1933. President Hoover has signed a bill appropriating $1,000,000 for that purpose.

Throughout the state and the nation, Founders' day is being observed by Parent-Teacher associations. Impressive ceremonies and inspiring programs mark the thirty-fifth anniversary of this great movement which began on February 17, 1897, in Washington, D. C. The Illinois branch was formed in 1900.

William G. Thon, chairman of the Illinois George Washington Bi-Centennial commission, has issued a call to the municipalities and citizens all over Illinois to join in celebrating the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington during the year 1932. Chairman Thon urges that every city, town, and village appoint a committee to carry on vigorously a program in honor of that great American statesman.

According to R. H. Shumway, seed authority of Rockford, home owners and renters in all parts of the country already are making preparations to utilize their back yards and vacant property for vegetable raising, to cut down living expenses during the spring and summer. From present indication, more people will have their own vegetable gardens than during the World war days of 1917-18, which established a record.

At a meeting of the Illinois Lumber and Material Dealers' association, held in Chicago, Fred C. Wentche, of Effingham, was elected president.

Indications are that there will be no such bumper crop of peaches in southern Illinois this year as there was last season. There are fewer buds showing up on the trees and these are menaced by the unseasonable warm weather which, if continued, will cause the buds to swell and expose them to serious damage should a cold snap follow. According to J. G. McCall, county farm advisor at Carbondale, there will not be a full crop of apples.

According to Prof. W. L. Burlison, of the University of Illinois, the recent cold snap and sleet storm did no noticeable damage to fruits and crops in central Illinois.

Subscriptions to the Illinois revenue notes reached $3,920,000 on the second day of sale. On February 11, subscriptions to the notes authorized by the special session of the legislature to finance the emergency relief fund amounted to $1,170,000. The campaign to dispose of the securities will be pushed intensively with expectations that all notes will be subscribed to within a very short time.

The annual meeting of the Federation of Illinois Colleges will be held on the campus of MacMurray college, Jacksonville, February 29 and March 1. Presidents from twenty colleges throughout the state will attend the two-day program.

Business Improvement. New orders have necessitated a four-story addition to the Bear Brand Hosiery mill at Kankakee. The factory has 50,000 spindles and more than 400,000 needles in operation. This factory's shipments in 1931 were the greatest in its history.

W. E. Haist, superintendent of the Beardstown division of the C. B. & Q. Railroad company, has announced that 58 men have been called back to work because of an increase in the road's business. Thirty-six of the recalled men were Beardstown residents and twenty-two were residents of Centralia.

Ralph Budd, the Burlington railway's new president, has returned from his first inspection trip over the company's lines and has announced that he expects to spend about $23,000,000 in 1932 for maintenance, improvements, and extensions.

A gradual increase in the pay roll at its Syracuse (N. Y.) plant is reported by the H. H. Franklin Manufacturing company. A still further increase in employment is expected when operations get under way at the new body building plant which the company is establishing there.

Steel operations have advanced from 27 to 31 per cent of capacity during the last three weeks. Executives are encouraged by the improvement in steel buying in the last few weeks. This demand, it is felt, presages a more important upturn in steel in January, when a seasonal expansion in trade may be expected.

American exports in October increased approximately $25,000,000 over those of September. The favorable American trade balance for the month was $30,000,000.

In conjunction with its observance of the George Washington Bi-Centennial on February 22, the Masonic lodge 1: Equality, will celebrate its ninety-fifth anniversary. The lodge is the second oldest in the state.

Judge William G. Cochran, eighty-seven years old, dean of the Moultrie county bar, died at the home of his daughter in Sullivan, on February 7. Judge Cochran was judge of the Circuit court for 18 years and a member of the Illinois general assembly for two terms.

The use of gasoline in Illinois continues to increase. December collections from the state fuel tax were $2,758,411.11, which is an increase of more than $800,000 over the same period for the year before.

Mrs. Nora C. Dunlap, wife of State Senator Henry M. Dunlap, of Savoy, died suddenly from heart disease on February 9. Mrs. Dunlap was known throughout the state because of her interest in women's organizations. She achieved the honor of "master homemaker" several years ago.

BECKY THATCHER

WHEN that "red-handed chief of the Black Avengers of the Spanish Main," more commonly known to readers of Mark Twain as Tom Sawyer, indulged in moments of un-pirate-like tenderness, little Becky Thatcher, Tom's schoolmate and sworn sweetheart, was the cause. Thus the great American humorist immortalized a love of his own youth when little Sam Clemens courted Laura Hawkins, who lived just down the street from him in Hannibal, Mo.

Out of their own school days came much of the similar material in "Tom Sawyer." The schoolmaster was a Mr. Cross, for whom Sam composed an elegant couplet:

"Cross by name, and cross by nature, Cross jumped over an Irish potato." From him Sam once actually did accept punishment for something Laura had done.

Sam Clemens left Hannibal at the age of eighteen, and Laura married and became Mrs. Frazier, went to live at Palmyra, Mo., and enjoyed at least one adventure that never got into a book. During the Civil war her husband, an outspoken Secessionist, was forced into hiding from Union troops commissioned to capture and silence him. With a woman's instinct for the right things to do, Laura during her husband's absence invited the Union commander, Gen. John McNeil, to dinner and filled him full of southern cooking and flattery. Some time later, when her husband had been captured and condemned to death, she made a personal plea for his life, which was granted by her former guest!

BUFFALO BILL

ASK the average American "Who was Buffalo Bill?" and he will answer "Why, Col. William F. Cody, of course!" Therein he will be only partly right for there were two other men who bore that title before Cody did.

In 1860, a year of drought in Kansas when the grasshoppers darkened the skies and ate up what crops were planted, a certain William Matthewson of Wichita, Kans., went out to kill buffalo and sent back several wagon-trains of meat to feed the starving settlers. They were so grateful for this that they nicknamed him "Buffalo Bill."

During the Indian war on the southern plains in 1867-69 William Comstock, a celebrated guide, hunter and one of the favorite scouts of Gen. Phil Sheridan, gained such renown as a buffalo hunter that army officers at Fort Wallace, Kan., dubbed him "Buffalo Bill" Comstock. In the meantime William F. Cody, who had been scouting for the troops at Fort Ellsworth and Fort Fletcher, Kan., had also won a great reputation as a slayer of buffaloes. He increased that reputation when he took the contract to furnish meat for the laborers who were building the Kansas Pacific railroad west.

So a hunting match between Comstock and Cody was arranged by their partisans and in this match Cody was victorious, killing sixty-nine buffaloes to Comstock's forty-eight within a specified time. From that time on, Cody was the undisputed (even though he had not been the first) Buffalo Bill and his Wild West show later spread his fame throughout the world.

BARBARA FRIETCHE

HEROISM met its just reward for the Barbara Fritche of Whittier's famed poem of that name. Forth from her attic window in Frederick, Maryland, leaned the courageous old woman, waving her bullet-torn Union flag and shouting down at the Confederate soldiers who had fired at it the famous lines:

"Shoot if you must this old gray head, But spare your country's flag—"

And Stonewall Jackson, over his sun-burned features a "blush of shame," replied in the equally famous couplet:

"Who touches a hair of you gray head, Dies like a dog, March on—"

Fame has dealt less kindly, however, with the real Barbara Fritche. Although Whittier believed and investigation since has established that a real woman of that name did indeed reside in Frederick at the time, we have her own nephew's word for it that Dame Barbara was ninety-six years old, bedridden and living in a house some distance from Jackson's line of march. There is even reason to suspect that Whittier's Barbara was in reality another woman, May Quantrell, who did live where the troops passed by and wave a defiant Union flag at them. Nevertheless, the Barbara Fritche legend lives on, the Whittier club only recently dedicated her restored "original" home, and in Sigmund Romberg's operetta "My Maryland" was proudly waved what was claimed to be the "original" flag! Lesson for March 6

JESUS WASHES HIS DISCIPLES' FEET

LESSON TEXT—John 13:1-17. GOLDEN TEXT—Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Washes the Disciples' Feet.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Performs a Humble Task.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Dignifies Lowly Service.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Spirit of Christianity.

I. Christ's Amazing Love for His Own (vv. 1-3).

Jesus was fully conscious of what was immediately before him. He knew that the cross with all its shame and anguish was upon him. He knew that his disciples would shamefully forsake him in a few hours. He knew that one of that number would be the instrument in the hands of the Devil in his betrayal. He was fully conscious of his deity. He knew that all things were in his hands. Despite all this, he displayed great patience and manifested untiring love. He did not withdraw his love from them because of their weakness and the shameful failure which he knew would soon be made manifest. He not only loved them to the end of his earthly ministry, but loved them unto the "uttermost." "Loved to the uttermost" means that he bestowed upon them his love even to the extent of taking their place in death.

II. Christ Washing the Disciples' Feet (vv. 4-11).

This act was symbolic of his amazing love for his disciples. Jesus did not regard his hands too holy to do this menial service.

- Steps in this service (vv. 4-6).
- a. He rises from supper.
- b. Laid aside his garments.
- c. Took a towel and girded himself.
- d. Poured water into a basin.
- e. Washed his disciples' feet.
- f. Wiped them with the towel wherewith he was girded.

These steps symbolize Christ's entire work of redemption. His rising from supper represents his rising from his place of enjoyment in the heavenly glory. His laying aside his garments symbolized his putting aside his vesture of majesty (Phil. 2:7, 8). His girding himself symbolized his taking the form of a servant (Phil. 2:7). The water in the basin—his cleansing blood. His washing of the disciples' feet—his actual cleansing of them through his Word (John 15:3; Eph. 5:26). His taking his garments again—his returning to his place and position of glory.

2. Peter's impetuosity and ignorance (vv. 6-9). When he realized what the Lord was doing, he refused to have his feet washed. When he realized the peril of refusal, he desired to be fully washed. He went from one extreme to another.

3. The significance of this service to those who participate in it (vv. 8-11).

a. It is a spiritual cleansing (v. 8). Fellowship with Jesus is only possible as we are continuously cleansed from our sins. The cleansing here is not the washing of regeneration, but that of sanctification. Even those who are regenerated need the continual cleansing of Christ's blood in order to have fellowship with him. He that is regenerated; that is, washed in the blood of Christ (symbolized by water baptism), does not need a repetition of the act, but he needs the cleansing of sanctification (symbolized by the washing of the feet).

b. A badge of brotherly affection (v. 14). This act showed his abandonment to the service of his disciples. This is a lesson that is much needed today. True love is tested by the service it renders.

c. A proof of humility (v. 15). This was a lesson much needed by the disciples, and much needed by us all today. They had just been disputing as to who should be the greatest in the kingdom. Thus their selfish ambition was expressing itself. On every hand we see expressions of pride, vanity, and even arrogance, in those who are professed followers of the lowly Jesus.

d. Equalization (v. 16). As the disciples were thus served by Jesus Christ, their vain ambitions were rebuked. To enter into this service in the Spirit of Christ is to encounter a leveling of humanity.

III. An Example for Us (vv. 14-16). Christ the Lord of all became the servant of all, and his disciples are under solemn obligation to follow him in their service to others.

This obligation rests upon his lordship (v. 14).

GEMS OF THOUGHT

Full redemption removes remorse.

Christ can change sadness to gladness.

Sin is like a river which begins in a quiet spring and ends in a stormy sea.

Jesus on earth—his path, his spirit, his ways—is the measure of our walk and obedience.

When TEETHING makes HIM FUSSY

One of the most important things you can do to make a teething baby comfortable is to see that little bowels do their work of carrying off waste matter promptly and regularly. For this nothing is better than Castoria, a pure vegetable preparation specially made for babies and children. Castoria acts so gently you can give it to young infants to relieve colic. Yet it is always effective, for older children, too. Remember, Castoria contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics—is absolutely harmless. When your baby is fretful with teething or a food upset, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Be sure you get genuine Castoria with the name:

The brain reaches its full size and weight at about the same time the rest of the body matures; that is, between the ages of twenty-two and twenty-five years.

SEVERE COUGH... COULDN'T SLEEP

Logansport, Ind. —"Just the least exposure would cause me to catch cold and it would settle in my bronchials, setting up an irritation, followed by a severe cough," said Mrs. Milton Warner of 416 Bartlet St. "I would have such severe coughing and choking spells that I would feel weak and faint afterwards. I could scarcely sleep at night for coughing, but since taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I have not had this trouble; it strengthened my bronchial tubes and I do not catch cold nearly so easily."

"Do You Look Both Ways Before Crossing?" is the timely caption on the March safety poster just issued by the Chicago Motor Club to more than 40,000 Illinois and Indiana schoolrooms.

The poster portrays two girls, looking in opposite directions, before venturing across an intersection.

It is used by teachers as the subject for general class discussion and composition, and is intended to supplement safety instruction received by children from their parents.

Since Friday closed the school days in February an appropriate assembly program was arranged to celebrate the birth of men of distinction whose natal day fell in this month of patriotism and romance.

It was a pleasure to meet these men in person and to hear them talk to us of their life and achievements. The initial character was Mr. Ground Hog. He told us of his long winter sleep and how a need for a new diet brought him out to investigate the weather. Buddy Warming impersonated Mr. Groundhog, Edward Lauffer in a quaint manner addressed the audience as Chas. Dickens the great English Author. Harold Balaz was General Sherman, who told of his famous march to the sea to the tune of "Marching Through Georgia". Sidney Lanier, poet, shares the same birthday. Glenn Knakmuhls, as the ancient astronomer, Copernicus, told how his investigations started the great science of the star worlds. Dorothy Hall in a charming style impersonated the great Mendelssohn and gave a piano solo to illustrate his great talent. The characteristic touch of romance was added when cupid as the spirit of St. Valentine, in the person of Dorothy Eiler, shot his intriguing arrows over the heads of the assembly. Edna Lorenz read a humorous poem, illustrative of Geo. Washington. Thomas A. Edison Abraham Lincoln and Charles Lindbergh also had appropriate places on the program.

Vivian Walston, as Alice Freeman Palmer, delightfully told of her experiences as a dean of women and early school teacher. James Russell Lovell, alias Charles Hostert, read his memorable poem, "The First Snow-fall".

The program closed when Henry Wadsworth Longfellow represented by Leona Jungles, read "The Arrow and the Song".

The Freshman English students are each composing an illustrated booklet based upon Scott's, "Lady of the Lake". These will be on display next week.

The Sophomores have completed the study of Silas Marner and have written a dramatization of the story which they will present for an assembly program next Friday. The best dramatization was written by Norman Hauck.

Much Interest Displayed In Flower Show

With the show opening still six weeks away the competitive classes for garden club exhibits in Chicago's spring flower show have nearly all been filled. There are a few classes in which entries may still be made but all clubs are advised by Mrs. Joseph E. Callender, in charge of entries, that the lists must soon be closed.

"We have received 34 entries of large gardens", said Mrs. Callender. These range from the special gardens 24 feet square entered by the Lake Forest Garden Club, Evanston Garden Club, Joliet Floral and Garden Club, and St. Charles Garden Club, to the 10x20 foot border plantings. They include terrace gardens, back door gardens, service yards and plots of miscellaneous types, and will be worked out in more exact detail than ever before to illustrate authentically small garden design.

The Morton Arboretum of Lisle, Ill., will make a garden 20x30 feet in which rare shrubs will be displayed. Each specimen will be fully identified and advice given as to its culture given.

The following local clubs have made entries in the show:

Beverly Hills Woman's Club-Garden Dept., Windsor Park Garden Club, Flossmoor Garden Club, Blue Island Garden Club, Chicago Heights Woman's Club-Garden Dept., Morgan Park Garden Club, Joliet Floral and Garden Club and Mokena Garden Club.

Stress is being put upon exhibits which teach lessons that can be applied in the out door garden.

Delicious Apple Desserts

THE healthful delicious apple helps to keep winter meals properly balanced. For this fruit can be turned simply and easily into many delicious desserts. The use of the quick cooking variety of tapioca blends the fruit and other ingredients into a new deliciousness.

Deep Dish Apple Tapioca

1/2 cup quick cooking tapioca	1 cup seedless raisins
1/4 teaspoon salt	1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup molasses	1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
2 1/2 cups hot water	1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
3 tart apples, thinly sliced	2 tablespoons butter

Add tapioca, salt, molasses to water. Cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Place apples in greased baking dish. Add raisins, sprinkle with sugar, nutmeg and cinnamon. Dot with butter. Add tapioca mixture. Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) 30 minutes, or until apples are tender. Serve hot or cold with lemon, maple, or hard sauce, or garnish with whipped cream. Serves 6.

Blushing Apple Tapioca

1/2 cup sugar	2 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca
1 1/2 cups water	1 lemon thinly sliced
2 tablespoons red cinnamon drops

4 large apples, cored and pared

Combine sugar, water, lemon, and cinnamon drops. Cook until cinnamon drops are dissolved, stirring constantly. Add apples and cook until tender, being careful that syrup does not boil away. Remove apples, measure syrup, and add enough water to make 1 cup. Add tapioca and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Remove from fire and add lemon juice. Fill apples to overflowing with tapioca mixture. Chill. Serve with whipped cream. Serves 4.

Apple Souffle

4 1/2 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca	1/2 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon salt	1 cup grated raw apple, or drained cooked apple pulp
3 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon-colored	3 egg whites, stiffly beaten
1/2 cup sugar

Add tapioca and salt to milk, and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add sugar. Cool. Add egg yolks, lemon juice, and apple. Fold in egg whites. Bake in greased ramekins, placed in pan of hot water, in moderate oven (325°F.) 45 minutes. Serve hot with sweetened whipped cream. Serves 8.

Remember when the Girls wore the huge Leg of Mutton sleeves in their dresses? Then meat was cheap.

Remember when us Kids use to cut up old newspapers into five inch squares, then hang them on a nail so the rain wouldn't wet them when the door blew open?

Remember when the Girls wore the wide silk ribbon sash, tied in a large bow in the back, and wouldn't sit down for fear they would muss or wrinkle their sash. That is the time corns on the little toes come to be a bad from pointed shoes.

Remember when they use to put the top of the wedding cakes in a glass case on a small stand in the parlor and the marriage certificate framed and hanging on the wall? Now they don't need a reminder they know it by heart.

SUCH IS LIFE—Not Up on Strange Words

By Charles Sughrue

OLD LEE HOMESTEAD IS BEING RESTORED

Will Revive Life and Culture of Old South.

Richmond, Va. — Stratford Hall, homestead of the Lee family in Virginia, a center of historical interest and a symbol of the life and culture of the Old South, has been saved for posterity. Through the efforts of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the Lee Memorial foundation the mortgage on the eleven-hundred-acre estate in Westmoreland county has been paid off and the last obstacle to the preservation of the mansion as a national shrine has been removed, says the New York Times.

There remains now the work of renovating the fine old house and restoring the extensive grounds which formerly made it one of the show places of the state, and this work will proceed as funds for the purpose are made available. Within a reasonably short time plantation life of the Eighteenth century will be resumed there in all its picturesque phases.

Completion of the purchase fund marked the close of another chapter in a dramatic story which had its start in Greenwich, Conn., early in 1928. Mrs. Charles D. Lanier of Greenwich, head of the William Alexander, Jr., Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, while rummaging through a desk which belonged to her mother-in-law, Mrs. Sidney Lanier, widow of the poet, came upon a penciled manuscript by Lanier, until then not known to exist.

A speech on Lee's Death. The paper proved to be a speech he had made in Macon, Ga., in 1870, on the death of General Lee, in which he urged the establishment of a memorial "by contributions as shall be within the compass of the humblest citizen who loved him and who desires the grateful privilege of laying some tribute on his tomb."

On the following day Mrs. Lanier received a letter from a friend describing a visit to Stratford and asking why it could not be preserved. On the same morning she called a meeting of her organization, which resulted in the adoption of resolutions looking to the acquisition of the homestead.

After months of negotiations arrangements were made with Charles E. Stuart, the owner, for its purchase, and the Robert E. Lee Memorial foundation was formed to acquire the property and conduct a campaign for contributions in all parts of the country. The price was fixed at $240,000. The mortgage was cleared away by an unconditional advance of $115,000 by a prominent Delaware woman.

Stratford hall is more than two hundred years old and bears the distinction of having been the birthplace of two signers of the Declaration of Independence, Richard Henry Lee and Francis Lightfoot Lee, as well as the home of "Light Horse Harry" Lee and other generations of the distinguished family.

It stands on a hillock not far removed from the Potomac in a section of the Northern Neck which the older generation of Virginians especially looks upon as hallowed ground. The estate fronts for two miles on the river, and within a few miles are the birthplaces of three Presidents—Washington, Madison and Monroe.

The house itself, built in the shape of the letter H, is two stories in height, with a tall basement forming the first floor, and is topped by massive quadruple chimneys on each wing. It was started in 1729 by Queen Caroline, wife of George II of England, with a gift of £300 toward the cost of its erection following a fire which destroyed the original manor house, on the site of which now is located the Lee family burial plot.

The House Well Preserved. The mansion, in a fine state of preservation, is built of brick on English lines by English standards, with walls of fortress thickness, and was known as the stateliest house of its time in Colonial Virginia.

In restoring the plantation with its Colonial atmosphere and its arts and industries as pursued two centuries ago, the old brick and saw mill, now in ruins, will be rebuilt and placed in operation. Spinning, weaving and wrought-iron craftsmanship will be practiced for the enlightenment of visitors and students. The tobacco warehouse will be reconstructed, and scenes of the old planting season revived. The old kitchen, with its 12-foot fireplace, will be fired again, and the tall brick wall again will hide the culinary operations from alien eyes.

The Garden Clubs of Virginia will complete the restoration picture with landscaping, terraces, flowers and rare shrubs such as once were the pride of the Lees and the delight of their many distinguished guests.

Mix a piece of butter with a blanc mange while it is still boiling and you will have no trouble turning it out of the mold when the pudding is cold. Moreover, it will have a much glossier appearance.

AFRICAN CANNIBALS CRAVE EPSOM SALTS

Will Spend Week's Wages for a Single Dose.

New York.—Mrs. William S. Seabrook, who shares the explorations of her noted husband, says that a white man can prosper by retailing epsom salts to the natives on the Ivory coast.

"Epsom salts," she says in the American Druggist, "are white magic to the people who deal in black magic, people who will work for a week to buy a single dose of salts, and consider themselves lucky to get it."

"One charming cannibal to whom my husband and I were indebted made a single request when asked how we could repay him for his many favors. He replied quickly and naively: 'Yes, send me epsom salts, and my fortune is made.'"

"His idea was to go into the cut-rate business and sell epsom salts for ten cents."

"Natives of the Ivory coast suffer terribly from constipation. Here you have a primitive people struggling with nature in a dense jungle, afflicted with a condition which we have been told results from a civilized and sedentary life. The difficulty is with their diet. They eat practically no greens and even among cannibals starchy food predominates.

"Witch doctors and sorcerers brew magic stews and make a lot of mumbo-jumbo, but the black men have discovered the efficiency of the white man's drugs, so they beg to borrow or buy them whenever possible. They may continue the treatment prescribed by their own witch doctor because in no event would they want to hurt a local practitioner's feelings; but if they can combine witches' brew and a good stiff cathartic, they feel pretty certain of complete cure."

THEY DON'T CHANGE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Emeritus Dean of Men,
University of Illinois.

We change very little after we are beyond the high-school age. I may have emphasized this fact at one time or another before, but it is more and more impressed upon me as time goes on. Between fourteen and eighteen our habits are pretty definitely formulated, and if they change it is generally only in degree. Only a revolution or a crisis will effect any material change.

I used not to think so. Going to college or getting married, or taking up a business of some sort, I imagined would work miracles in the development or the modification of a man's character. I see now that none of these things makes very much difference.

I hadn't seen Maguire for more than thirty-five years until he dropped upon me a few weeks ago. He was the wittiest, cleverest man in my class, cheerful, happy, ready for a lark and ready to laugh at a good joke even if it were on himself. He did his work easily and well; he had a keen insight into human nature and a dependable judgment in critical matters. He was clean-minded and reverent. When he decided to enter the legal profession we all thought he had chosen wisely, and then having finished law he suddenly decided to enter the priesthood of the Roman church. I hadn't cast him in that role, but the qualities he had revealed when we were young fellows are admirable qualities for a leader of the church.

He had not been in my office ten minutes until I saw that, priest that he is, he has not changed excepting to strengthen the fine qualities which he had revealed when we were boys together. He still has the happy outlook upon life and the keen sense of humor which is so characteristic of the Irish.

"BY SWITCHING TO TARGET MY HUSBAND SAVES 50 CENTS A WEEK"

We had to cut down expenses, so my husband did his share by switching to Target and rolling his own cigarettes. I felt kind of sorry for him at first, but I notice he's more cheerful than ever.

"He tells me that Target rolls up into cigarettes that look and taste like ready-mades. Target is the same mixture of foreign and domestic tobaccos that the ready-mades use. You get 40 special gummed papers free. No wonder my husband tells me he's glad he changed. He's getting more cigarette pleasure than ever, and we're saving about enough to pay for the family's bread and butter each month."

HUSBANDS, PLEASE NOTE!

You pay less than one-sixth the government tax on ready-mades when you roll your own from TARGET. Buy a pack of TARGET. Roll yourself fifteen or twenty smokes. If you don't say they are the best cigarettes you have ever smoked, return the half empty package to your dealer's and you'll get your time back.

Frederick spelled badly and received very poor grades. One day he returned with a paper well sprinkled with the usual crosses. His mother looked it over.

"Here is one word marked wrong that is right," she said.

"No, she knows," replied the lad hopelessly.

"You must show it to your teacher, anyway," said his mother.

Frederick did as he was told and returning to his mother, reported:

Honored for Valor

The Cheney award, consisting of a plaque, a certificate of award and a substantial cash contribution, was awarded to Private John B. Smith of the United States army air corps. The award, made annually to the officer or enlisted man of this branch of service performing the outstanding act of valor during the year, was made to Private Smith who, when a plane crashed into the building in which he was working, dived head first into the blazing cockpit and liberated the pilot's foot which was firmly wedged in the rudder bar. Smith, though injured by the crash, then removed the unconscious pilot to a place of safety.

Migratory Waistlines

The waistline of the members of the "fair sex" has now returned to almost the normal level after having slipped down almost to the knees. These vagaries, however, like the rest of fashion's fancies, are no new thing, and in an old French book published in 1820, when George IV was king, we find this sentence: "The waist is a part of the body, whose length, breadth, shortness, or smallness is entirely regulated by fashions, which sometimes does not appear to allow of any."

THE STORY

Six bandits hold up the steamer, Midnight Sun, on the Mackenzie, kill Jimmy Montgomery, and escape with gold dust and furs. At the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance, Sergt. Alan Baker disputes with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, regarding plans for the capture of the bandits. Baker starts out in the police launch with five men. At the MacMillan trading post, Joyce MacMillan is thrilled at the arrival of the police launch. She had expected to marry Baker, and had been stunned at the news that he was to marry Elizabeth Spaulding. Stolen furs are found on the MacMillan place and evidence points to Joyce's father. Alan leads his expedition up the big Alooska. Compelled by Haskell's foolish orders to divide the party, Alan falls to capture the bandits, and returns to Fort Endurance. Haskell blames him for the failure and Alan is allowed to buy out of the Mounted on condition that he absolve Haskell from blame. Alan starts out of the country in a motor canoe. He meets "Buzzard" Featherfoot, famous aviator, and enlists him in the enterprise. "Slob-ice" Jensen, leader of the bandits, plans to capture Joyce. Haskell suspects Alan's plans, and plots to capture him.

CHAPTER IX—Continued

Looking ahead through the propeller disk, he glimpsed the great blue lake of his rendezvous with Bill. A few minutes later on the northern shore he sighted Goose point reaching out into the sunlit waters of En Traverse.

Leaning forward, he pointed out the promontory to Buzzard and shouted into his partner's ear:

"That's the place. Glide down and light, close in as you can. I don't see Bill there, but he probably couldn't get away from duty to wait for us. Our supplies are cached in that red-willow thicket back next to the woods. We'll go ashore and get them."

Buzzard cut off ignition. The engine roar stopped. As the plane glided down at a mile-long tangent and swept over Goose Point, Alan leaned out into the slip-stream and looked under keel, searching the flag-and-willow headland for a possible sight of Bill Hardsock.

Hardly expecting to meet Bill, he was not surprised when his old partner failed to show up. But as the machine glided silently over the point, his eyes were caught by an object there on the muddy landwash. At a second glance he saw it was a large gasoline drum lying in full view at the very tip of the headland.

The sight of the drum startled him.

He queried silently: "Why the devil did Bill put that thing out there so glaring? He didn't need to draw my attention; we arranged about the cache."

Beyond the point the plane touched the surface, plowed on through a shower of spray and came to a stop three hundred yards off the landwash.

In the scarlet-and-gold police launch, hidden behind a low-sweeping balsam at water edge, Inspector Haskell and Corporal Whipple watched the machine whirl low over the point. As it came down and down, Haskell clutched his rifle a little tighter and watched intently.

His heart leaped as the machine touched the wavelets, skimmed on a little distance, and came to a stop.

"They're going ashore," he breathed exultantly to Whipple, as though unable to believe his incredible luck. "We'll skim out and ram the plane. Get ready!"

Uneasy, Alan stood up in the cockpit and searched the headland with his glasses. Over and over he kept telling himself that it wasn't like Bill, his cautious old patrol partner, to roll that drum of gas out there.

While he was searching the point, he felt Buzzard excitedly grasp his arm.

"Alan! Look! . . . Lord's sake!—look over there!"

Alan whirled and looked where he pointed, at the southern shore of the lake eight miles away.

On a long timbered headland there a sudden sheet of flame had leaped up nearly sixty feet into the air and stood out above the tree tops, with a fiery puff and cloudlet of smoke visible for miles and miles across the open water. A few seconds later the flame died down a little, as though it had been of explosive origin, but a clump of paper birches up which the flame had raced still continued to burn like a gigantic torch.

Focusing on that distant headland, Alan saw nothing except the fire-wrapped birches. As he brought the glasses down, mystified, frowning, his uneasiness swept through him again, sharp and insistent. That suspicious drum of gasoline—Bill surely wouldn't have rolled it out there. That huge burst of fire across the lake—it had some meaning.

"Buzzard, something's wrong here! All wrong! I don't like the idea of going ashore here. If something's wrong, you don't know what we might be walking into."

"Well, what're you going to do? We've got seven gulls of gas in the wing tank and five in the emergency, and we can't get far on that!"

"Maybe so, but I'm not walking into any trap. Somebody's over there where we saw that big gob of fire. I'm suggesting we get into the air again and hop across and have a look-see. That's our best bet. This layout here is all off-color and I know it."

"All right. We'll hop across. But a couple more hops around over this landscape, and we'll be rocking on the wavelets."

From the height of a hundred feet Alan looked ahead through his glasses, scrutinizing that timbered point where the birches were still ablaze.

He started as the glasses picked up a tiny man-figure far away on that headland. Watching, he saw it rush out upon the extreme rock tip. With the plane whirling nearer, he caught the figure in sharper focus—and recognized Bill Hardsock!

Waving his arms, hat and part of a pine tree, Bill was frantically trying to draw their attention.

Alan leaned forward, cupped his hands and shouted to Buzzard:

"That's Bill! There on the headland. Light and taxi in. He's waving us down, so it must be safe. We'll soon see what the trouble is."

They angled down on the water and skimmed close in ashore. In a canoe Bill came paddling out to meet them.

"I know you'd make it, Alan!" he panted, looking with marveling eyes at Buzzard and the plane. "I knowed you'd show up sometime. The gas and oil—that is, most of it—it's right ashore here, ready for you. There's more cached up the Alooska, too. I was scared. . . . When you lit down over there. . . . Lord! I was afraid you were a goner!"

Hastily introducing a new partner to an old one, Alan demanded: "What do you mean, Bill? What under heaven are you doing over here? What happened? Man, you're all shot!"

"Am half-dead," Bill admitted. His voice was thick, he could hardly stand up. With the long strain over, a fearful reaction had set in. He looked ready to fall down dead asleep.

"But what happened?" Alan repeated.

"Alan, that Johnny Jump-up caught onto our trick. He was out to bag this air machine and nail you two. And he came skittish close to doing it. Lemme tell it:

"I had those drums cached over there on Goose point like we arranged, and I was waiting there, never suspecting a thing. One evening. . . . Must've been four or five days ago; I've d-n near lost track of time. . . . Anyway, I was sitting there in the willows slapping mosquitoes and listening to a couple whisky-jacks raise Cain with something back at the timber edge.

"I hadn't nothing much to do, so I sort of moseyed back that way to see what all the fuss was about. When I got up pretty close I all at once smelled tobacco smoke, cigarette smoke. Just a faint whiff, but no mistake about it.

"What the h—!?" says I. "Who's smoking Turkey tobacco around here?" It made me leery right away. I followed my nose up-wind and snuck up real careful. There in the first drogue of balsam was a Smoky, that Ogi-To-max, sitting against a tree, lighting one cigarette on the butt of the last. They were that kind of cigarette that Haskell gets clear from Paris, Alan.

"When he finally got wise to somebody being near, he grabbed for his rifle. But I jumped for him too quick and hit him a couple times, and while he was coming out of it I lopped that gun of his around a tree. Then I collared him and asked him what the condemnationsternation his intentions might be. At first he closed up like an oyster and wouldn't do nothing but grunt and look sour. I was suspicious of him laying low there watching me, so I up and lammed h—l out of him then and there till he did pry open his jaws.

"Haskell had hired him to shadow me and spy out what I was doing. He must have got hep somehow to me taking that gas. And he and that fishworm Whipple were coming there to Goose point in the launch to get me, gas, oil, then lay low and nail you two when you lit down. Two bits to a shirt button they're over there right now!"

As he thought how close he and Buzzard had come to going ashore and being captured, Alan shuddered.

Bill went on: "When the Smoky told me that. . . . Say, did I make some tall tracks? I never got such a wiggle on in my life. With the Smoky helping, I made two trips across the lake and snaked the drums all away—all except one drum which I heard the launch coming and didn't have time to take—"

"It's still over there," Alan interrupted. "They rolled it out in plain sight like a decoy, but instead of that it made me suspicious. They overplayed. But what got you all shot this way, Bill?"

"I've been awake four or five days and nights, that's what! Not a wink! Didn't dare sleep. It made me sweat blood to think of you lighting down over there and getting nailed. I had to draw your attention somehow, when you were over the lake; and it had to be one whooper of a signal, that far away. I got a couple big piles of birch paper ready and had a drum of gas handy to soak it with; and I kept a dry-wood fire going so's I could stand back and throw a blazing chunk at the paper. But it made the signal, all right. It nearly singed me and I stood thirty feet back."

"I'll vow it made a signal," Buzzard commented. "It looked like the evacuation of Lens."

"I had to stay awake every minute," Bill continued, "for fear you'd come and fly right into the trap. And then I had to guard the Smoky. He's tied up back there; didn't dare turn him loose, or he'd told Haskell where I was. If I'd ever got started dozing, I'd have beaten this Rip Winkle fellow for long-distance sleeping. There was times when I got so near overpowered I had to wade out and set on a rock with the water up under my chin, where I didn't dare go to sleep or I'd been drowned."

Merely by looking at Bill, Alan knew that his former partner had left half his story untold. It was only afterwards that he heard all the details of Bill's heroic siege.

"How about Joyce?" he asked.

"You've been to see her, Bill?"

"I ducked aside twice. Last time was a week ago. She's taken in a big raft of peltry. She's closing up the place to go out to Edmonton and be with her dad."

"A week ago," Alan thought. "Anything could have happened in a week." He asked, "Any news at Endurance?"

Just everyday things, Bill reported. Except for Larry. Larry would cry, Bill said, whenever he looked at his shattered leg. Larry, who kept himself as young as men half his age, who prided himself on his wolf-lean body—he was wasted away to a mere shadow of his former self.

Glancing out across En Traverse, Alan suggested: "We'd better be leaving here. Haskell and his stool pigeon over there probably saw us light. They may take a notion to whip across the lake after us. Where's the oil and gas, Bill?"

"Right yon by that rock jumble. The Smoky is just this side. I'll go along—"

"You stay here; you're about once in. Buzzard, you turn the plane and make ready for a quick getaway in case that launch shows up. I'll get the drums."

He hurried to the tangle of junipers and granite boulders where he found the precious gas and oil which Bill had sworn to bring to the rendezvous. Taking a load out to the plane, Alan hoisted it up to Buzzard, who began siphoning into the wing tank.

Stages of Civilization Recorded by Currency

Money, according to Farnam Zerbe, former president of the American Numismatic association, is a historian of the first rank.

Money is a documentary record of the progress of man and the stages of civilization. Coins are imperishable manuscripts in metal, unfolding a concise story of the refinements and energy of the people producing them. The history of money for the past 5,000 years is also a history of mankind.

Coins indicate to what estate has risen the art, architecture and metallurgy of a people; mythology and religion here are graven in imperishable record. Greece in all her glory and Rome before the fall of the empire are portrayed for all to see in the bushels of coins uncovered by modern excavation.

The deterioration which followed the universal tragedy of a dead empire is reflected in the barbarously crude coins of the Middle Ages. Money tells a story of conquest and siege, of victory and defeat, of culture and ignorance. Money records lost causes, tells of the rise and fall of the affairs of men; it suggests civilizations destroyed and forgotten.

Parade Into Fields

Bulgaria is 5,000 red-footed villages strewn along streams, scattered in clusters over plains, straggling along the crest of hills, and all the work, order, love and sacrifice, song and prayer that fill them.

On May mornings Bulgaria is a stream of grandparents, parents and children, flocks of sheep, herds of cattle, droves of pigs and geese, all pouring forth from their appointed places. Mother carry babies in tiny hammocks on their backs, and on reaching the fields hang them to the flowering branches of leafy trees or to shaded tripods. If the journey is long, donkeys carry the swaddled infants in saddlebags.

My Word

"Talk is cheap," is a common saying. And language often extravagant.

WORK IN THE HOME CALLS FOR "TRAVEL"

A mail carrier presents official figures showing that in the course of his forty-two-year career he walked a distance equal to nine journeys around the earth. But the housewife, the waitress, the bus conductor, the doctor and many another person who does not seem to move far from one spot takes, in reality, an astonishing amount of exercise. Pedometer records have shown that a woman with a husband and two children, walked about fifty miles in the course of a week. In another case tested by pedometer, a girl dancer at a theater, who has plenty to do on the stage, found that her work entailed fewer steps than that of a housewife who had no children to look after. Schoolboys and girls have been found to walk more than seventy miles a week, in the course of their restless flittings hither and thither. A London bus conductor has a very strenuous day's physical labor. In addition to walking about thirty miles in the course of his week's work, he has been found to climb every day the equivalent of nearly two-thirds of the height of Mount Snowdon. A golf professional discovered that he had walked a little over 110 miles in the course of giving 54 ordinary lessons to beginners on the links.—London Mail.

Fifty and Fit

A MAN is as old—or as young—as his organs.

At fifty, you can be in your prime.

Why go along with "fairly good health" when you might be enjoying vigor you haven't felt for years?

There's a simple little thing anyone can do to keep the vital organs stimulated, and feel fit all the time. People don't realize how sluggish they've grown until they've tried it. The stimulant that will stir your system to new life is Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. It will make a most amazing difference in many ways.

This famous doctor's prescription is a delicious syrup made with fresh herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. It starts its good work with the first spoonful. That's all you need to drive away the dullness and headache of a bilious spell, and rid the system of that slow poison that saps your strength. It's better than a tonic for tired bowels, and unlike habit-forming laxatives you can take it freely or give it to any child. And it isn't expensive.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and take a little tonight. Don't wait until you're sick to give your system this wonderful help. You can avoid those spells of biliousness or constipation. A spoonful every now and then is better than constant worry about the condition of your bowels, or fear of auto-intoxication as you grow older. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin preps the system. All druggists keep this preparation.

In Memoriam

SCHWESER JOHN—In loving memory of our father who passed away fifteen years ago March 5th.
Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love's remembrance outlasts them
all;

And the years be many or few,
They are filled with remembrance,
dear of you.

Signed: CHILDREN.

MAKING UP

ARE YOU LISTENIN'? Tony Wons, whose "Are you listenin'?" is heard daily over one of the national radio chains, is now making a vaudeville tour of the Midwest with the Camel Quarter Hour, which has proven one of radio's most popular acts. Picture shows Wons learning the art of make-up from Miss Ann Hicks, preparatory to beginning the tour.

NIAGATRI BUSINESS NEWS

By Marion Funk

The regular business meeting of the Niagara Girls was held Saturday, February 27th at the home of Mrs. Swisher. We discussed about getting the charter for our club.

Mrs. Swisher gave all the girls what they are supposed to sew or embroider for our bunco party which may be held sometime this spring. We were very glad to have two new members join our club.
They are Marion Moss and Pearl La Lorne. We hope they will enjoy our club as much as we have. The meeting was closed with our cheer. The next business meeting will be on the 26th of March.

By Lois Klepper

On Friday, February 26 the Ni-agari Girls club were entertained by Eileen Mohr and Hazel Manzki at Eileen's home. We played bunco and how those dice did roll. Florida Maurin received the consolation prize. We went home after enjoying Artic bars.

Don't forget pals the next social.
Try and come. The date will be announced later.

Mrs. George Schreiber is ill with a flu attack.
Peter Parenti has been very ill
the past week. He is somewhat improved.

The Tinley Park Business Men's Association meets Friday night.

Mrs. Kate Hopman was hurt in a fall at her home the past week.

Lester Stoltenberg has sold out south of Tinley Park.

FRANKFORT

Edward Bodong, 20 years old was a patient at the Silver Cross Hospital. His automobile was smashed into a twisted pile of metal and wood Wednesday afternoon in a collision with a fast freight train at Frankfort, escaping with nothing more serious than painful bruises.
Bodong operates an oil station at 79th St. and Route 22. He was driving into the village at 3:40 o'clock on a side road which leads off of the state highway. Nearing the Michigan Central depot he was about to drive on across the railroad tracks when a fast east bound freight train carrying meats and other perishables and going 35 miles an hour flashed over the crossing.
Before Bodong could stop the car
it struck the locomotive. The auto was picked up and carried for 75 feet down the tracks and finally deposited demolished in a ditch at the side of the right of way. Witnesses to the crash extricated Bodong and he was taken care of by Dr. Ernest McMahon of Mokena. He was taken to the Silver Cross hospital.

Conductor Lidke of Niles, Michigan who was riding the train said the engineer thought Bodong intended to stop at the crossing and so did not halt the train.
